«11th Scientific Conference on Sustainable Tourism»

Digitization at the service of sustainable tourism management
Tahiti (French Polynesia), June 2-4 2020

Most tourists use the Internet to get information, prepare and organize their trips. Digitization in tourists' behavior is mainly oriented towards preparation of trips and the sharing of experience after it is over. While it is true that different nationalities use the Internet differently, all tourists attach importance to the comments and ratings posted on reservation sites to confirm their choice, discover bargains or share their experience. Digital technology makes it possible for tourists to look for information (about accommodation, transport, leisure, journeys), to plan their activities during their stay and to share information. The tourism industry plays a major role in the development of places and in communication to the general public. Thanks to digitization, the actors of tourism can, for example, develop awareness of the development of sustainable development.

The issue at stake for sustainable tourism is notably to develop communication on the Internet in relation with best practice of leisure and tourism activities, via interactive and community tools.

The question of the digitization of tourism products in tourist sites, notably insular ones, needs to be considered. What digital strategy should be put into place for sustainable tourism and the protection of nature, notably in the context of islands? What are the best communication strategies to be applied in sustainable tourism? The objective of the conference is to examine the means to organize digitization in the framework of the commercialization of tourism destinations and products, notably islands. Researchers are invited to submit empirical, methodological research and conceptual documents which emphasize topics linked to the implementation of sustainable tourism management.

Suitable potential issues are as follows:

- Specifics and issues at stake in sustainable island tourism
- Management of tourism flows
- Tourism sites' absorption capacity
- Valuation and protection of heritage
- Island accessibility and tourism development (international and local air/sea transport).
- Economic dependency on tourism and associated risks
- Distribution of tourism revenue
- Management of real estate
- Preservation of public access to the seashore
- Protection of marine areas and tourism policies
- Management of sustainable tourism
- Marketing and sustainable tourism organizations
